Subject: California Greywater Code

Dear Dave Walls,

My name is Nick Santos and I live in Sacramento, having been raised there and educated at UC Davis. I took a course in college where we designed a green building to be built on the UC Davis campus, and one of the biggest impediments to truly environmentally friendly design that we encountered was greywater restrictions. As a state with a water crisis, common sense regulations like these are needed ASAP so that our architects and engineers can begin implementing these wonderful systems for washing machines and single-fixture systems without needing to obtain permits. I believe this new code will protect the health of both California's citizens and the environment - as well as the state's economy by preserving our most precious resource.

Please keep the no-permit requirement intact and continue removing barriers of permits and fees for simple sustainable practices.

Thank you so much for your time and your work.

Sincerely,
Nicholas Santos
