Retro-commissioning:

Retro-commissioning (RCx), is an event in the life of a n existing building that applies a systematic investigation process for improving or optimizing a building's overall performance and the way it's maintained and operated. The RCx process most often focuses on dynamic energy-using systems with the goal of reducing energy waste, obtaining energy cost savings, and identifying and fixing existing problems. Although RCx may include recommendations for capital improvements, the primary focus is on using diagnostic testing to identify and implement operation and maintenance tune-up activities to optimize the building systems.
