

The California Department of General Services (DGS) does not discriminate on the basis of disability in its hiring or employment practices nor does it retaliate against individuals who participate in the reasonable accommodation process. DGS will not deny anyone a job-related opportunity based on an individual's request for a reasonable accommodation. DGS will use the definition for mental and physical disability set forth in the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (Gov. Code, § 12926) unless the definitions under the federal Americans with Disabilities would provide greater protection.

To request reasonable accommodation, an employee may communicate his/her need verbally or in writing to his/her supervisor or manager. To request reasonable accommodation, an applicant may communicate his/her need in a manner that can be understood by the supervisor or manager conducting the examination. This includes but is not limited to communicating the request verbally or in writing. To expedite the interactive process, employees and applicants are encouraged to use this reasonable accommodation form to ensure all necessary information is obtained.

Instructions for employee/applicant:

Section A Provide your identifying information, list requested accommodation, reason for requested accommodation, and list the duration the accommodation will be needed.

Section B If requested, have your healthcare provider answer questions 1 – 8, date, sign, and provide his/her credentials and health organization in the appropriate areas. Be sure to provide your healthcare provider a copy of your duty statement or examination bulletin. Once all parts have been completed, sign and date the form and give it to your supervisor or the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator (RAC). It is the employee and applicant's responsibility to ensure they respond to DGS' requests for further information related to the request for reasonable accommodation. The employee or applicant also incurs all costs associated in providing this information to DGS.

The Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act (GINA) prohibits employers from requesting or requiring genetic information of an individual or family member of the individual, except as specifically allowed by this law. To comply with this law, we are asking that you do not provide any genetic information when responding to requests for medical information. "Genetic information," as defined by GINA, includes an individual's family medical history, the results of an individual's or family member's genetic tests, the fact that an individual or an individual's family member sought or received genetic services, and genetic information of a fetus carried by an individual or an individual's family member or an embryo lawfully held by an individual or family member receiving assistive reproductive services.

Instructions for Supervisor:

You have five (5) working days after becoming aware of the individual's need for reasonable accommodation to communicate and forward any documentation pertaining to the request to the RAC at ReasonableAccommodation@dgs.ca.gov. If the individual's request for accommodation is made verbally, please use this form to document the request and ask the individual to verify the information and sign the request to ensure the information is accurate. If the individual does not, or cannot, sign the request, the supervisor should note the employee did not, or could not sign, and forward the request to the RAC.

The Department of General Services (DGS) shall provide reasonable accommodation for employees and job applicants with a disability, unless it would cause an undue hardship. The law does not require the use of this or any other form to make a request for reasonable accommodation. Medical certification may be required (see Section B).
