

Phased Out

By Darlene Newman

The State Relocatable Classroom Program (SRCP) Phase-Out Plan has been accomplished. The SRCP first began as the Emergency School Classroom Law of 1979 to provide classroom facilities for the rapidly growing student population in California’s Kindergarten through 12th grade schools.

For more than thirty years, the SRCP moved and leased thousands of State relocatable classrooms to districts at school site locations where facilities were impacted by rapid growth. As the SRCP fleet grew and aged, the demand declined for relocatables as a result of funding for permanent school facility programs. Thus, in October 2005, the State Allocation Board (SAB) approved the conclusion of the SRCP through the SRCP Phase-Out Plan.

At the January 26, 2011 SAB meeting, the OPSC reported the conclusion of the SRCP Phase-Out Plan and the liquidation of the fleet of approximately 6,800 relocatable classrooms.

The State Allocation Board approved a new Charter School Agreement template at its January 2011 meeting. Prior to the passage of Senate Bill 592, title to facilities for Charter School Facilities Program (CSFP) projects was required to be held by the school district in which the project was physically located. Senate Bill 592 changed the law to allow the opportunity for either the charter school or a local governmental entity to hold title to CSFP project facilities.
